

Theorem

As I look out the window,
The glass gets in my way
And all I can see
Is myself looking out
At the constant regression
Of the street signs
Reflected in my eyes
Reflected in the window

And

Again

Sometimes, I place a mirror
On the wall
Adding distance
And angled resistance
To it all

And if I get it just right,
The mirror catches both
The street and the glass image
And bounces it all back again.
